RES4Med&Africa, together with BonelliErede (in cooperation with Bahaa-Eldin Law Office), is organizing a high-level Business-to-Government (B2G) workshop focused on the role of project finance and how it can secure and boost renewable energy (RE) investments to accelerate Egypt’s clean energy transition.

The B2G workshop aims at presenting project finance risk mitigation as a way to foster RE investments in Egypt by gathering the international private sector, experienced international companies within the RES4Med&Africa network and relevant Egyptian stakeholders, to share lessons learned and identify priorities going forward. The workshop will cover many aspects of the RE sector, with a special focus on the project finance structures of RE projects.

The event will also present the findings of the study “Project Finance Risk Mitigation on Renewable Energy Projects: The Egyptian Case”, carried out by RES4Med&Africa together with BonelliErede (in cooperation with Bahaa-Eldin Law Office), Pöyry, Enel Green Power, Italgen, RINA Consulting, PwC, Siemens Gamesa and Enerray. The study aims at presenting the project financing mechanisms and all financing schemes and frameworks that would allow a consistent and profitable investment in renewables, giving more confidence to international investors to develop RE projects in Egypt.

Egypt has set a national target to supply 20 percent of generated electricity from renewable sources by 2022. Although the country became a net energy importer in 2015, the national target will contribute to turn the tide. Today, the share of electricity generated from renewables represents only 1.5%, which makes the 20% target a considerable challenge; nevertheless, recently an important change of pace in the legal and regulatory frameworks is pushing ahead the growth of renewable energy in the country, which can make the targets more realistic and achievable in the medium term.

Building on RES4Med&Africa’s unique role as a public-private cooperation platform, the workshop presents an ideal occasion for proactive dialogue on how to develop the vast potential of Egypt’s RE market together with local institutions, the most relevant stakeholders of the Egyptian RE sector and international companies within the RES4Med&Africa network.
